Tintin heirs lose legal battle over artist's parodies

The French artist who was sued by the Tintin creator Hergé's heirs over his paintings that place the boy adventurer in romantic encounters has won his case after a court deemed them parodies.

Xavier Marabout's dreamy artworks place Tintin in the landscape of Edward Hopper. Earlier this year, the Breton artist was sued for infringement by Moulinsart, which manages the Tintin business. Last week, the complaint was rejected by a court in Rennes.
